ORAL JUDGEMENT

Petitioner Khant Bhupatbhai Dadubhai, by way of this petition under Article 226 of the Constitution of India has challenged the order of his detention dated 30.1.1996 passed under section 3(1) of the Prevention of Anti Social Activities Act, 1985 (hereinafter referred to as the "PASA Act") by the District Magistrate, Amreli.

In the grounds of detention supplied to the petition, relying on 5 prohibition cases which are pending in the court and the statements of six witnesses regarding the anti social and nefarious activities of the detenu, the detaining authority has recorded a finding that the detenu is a bootlegger within the meaning of section 2(b) of the PASA Act and with a view to preventing the detenu from acting in any manner prejudicial to the maintenance of public order it was necessary to pass the order of detention against the detenu and, therefore, the impugned order is passed, which is under challenge in the present petition.

Ms. Kachhavah learned advocate for the petitioner has raised number of contentions. However, it is not necessary to deal with each of them as the petition can be disposed of on the first contention itself. Ms. Kachhavah has submitted that the subjective satisfaction arrived at by the detaining authority that the detenu is a bootlegger is not genuine as the alleged activities of the detenu as a bootlegger do not affect adversely or are not likely to affect adversely the maintenance of the public order. In the submission of Ms. Kachhavah the offences alleged against the detenu in the order of detention and also the allegations made by the witnesses could not be said to have created any feeling of insecurity or panic or terror among the members of the public of the area in question giving rise to the question of maintenance of public order. In support of her submission, reliance is placed by Ms. Kachhavah on the decision of Supreme Court in the case of Piyush Kantilal Mehta vs. Commissioner of Police, Ahmedabad City and another, reported in AIR 1989 SC p. 491. In the said case, the Supreme Court has laid down as under:

It may be that the detenu is a bootlegger within the meaning of S. 2(b) of the Act, but merely because he is a bootlegger he cannot be preventively detained under the provisions of the act unless, as laid down in sub-sec. (4) of S. 3 of the Act, his activities as a bootlegger affect adversely or are likely to affect adversely the maintenance of public order. A person may be very fierce by nature, but so long as the public generally are not affected by his activities or conduct, the question of maintenance of public order will not arise. In order that an activity may be said to affect adversely the maintenance of public order, there must be material to show that there has been a feeling of insecurity among the general public. If any act of a person creates panic or fear in the minds of the members of the public upsetting the even tempo of life of the community, such act must be said to have a direct bearing on the question of maintenance of public order. The commission of an offence will not necessarily come within the purview of 'public order'.

I have gone through the statements of the witnesses in the present case and in my view, the facts in the present case are identical to the case before the Supreme Court and, therefore, the ratio laid down by the Supreme Court in the case of Piyush Kantilal Mehta (supra) is applicable to the present case. Suffice to say that the witnesses in the present case have alleged that the detenu, by indulging in use of force and violence and by illegal sale of liquor, has created an atmosphere of fear and terror by beating innocent citizens. It is also alleged that the detenu is indulging in anti-social activities and that the activities were against public order. Considering the statements of the witnesses, I am of the view that they are vague and general and no reliance can be placed on the same. Apart from that the witnesses have not stated anything which would even remotely suggest the breach of the maintenance of public order. The cumulative reading of the statements of the witnesses would go to suggest that the detenu is selling the illicit liquor openly at the public premises namely near the bus stand, school and temple and people are tolerating the same and whosoever objects to the same, the detenu beat them. Thus, considering the statements, even accepting the statements on its face value as true, the same at the most constitute the breach of law and order, but under no circumstances will be construed as the breach of public order. In view of this observation, I am of the view that the subjective satisfaction arrived at by the detaining authority is not genuine and, therefore, the continuous detention of the detenu is vitiated.

In the result, this petition is allowed. The impugned order of detention dated 30.1.1996 is quashed and set aside. The detenu Khant Bhupatbhai Dadubhai is directed to be set at liberty forthwith if his detention is not required for any other purpose. Rule is made absolute with no order as to costs.
